Your Guide to the World of Furry Fandom

Volume 13, Number 1

Our Motto: All The News We Get, We Print!

Fall/Winter, 2001

We Scare...

Hey, weren't we just here? And how... After a hair-pulling summer and early fall trying to get the last issue out to people (or it would have been hair-pulling if your ed-otter had hair), In-Fur-Nation is making an effort to get back on schedule, bring you folks the furry news you want and love. Read on for more helpful information on upcoming furry fandom conventions, after a brief update from our intrepid reporters...

Reflections on September... So much has been said, so much written, and so much water has gone under the bridge since September 11, 2001. What more can this humble furry fan add? Some say we entered a whole new world on that day... Others, your ed-otter among them, say we were simply given a violent reminder of what sort of world we actually live in. And of the work still ahead of us. So what can we do now? Trying to live our 'normal lives' as the government suggests would be downright silly. Nothing feels normal anymore. So what can we do? Many many things... among them, entertain ourselves. I'm serious. Here in the western world, we place a special value on our entertainment and leisure time that much of the rest of humanity considers to be rather odd, if not downright decadent. Well, more power to us! It's part of what makes us who we are: We can laugh at the weirdest things, and turn the oddest events of our lives into a song. It's been said that terrorists' greatest triumph is to make you change the way you would otherwise chose to live your own life. So here it is – Go to the movies. Watch TV and surf the Internet. Go to plays, and sporting events, and amusement parks. And every time you do, think of it as thumbing the nose of some would-be terrorist. And, as a rebellious salute (we're good at those) to all the lives we've lost.

Due to the legal maneuvering of another company which claimed to own their name (don't even ask...), Mailbox Books has been forced to change its name to Rabbit Valley. Same service though: Providing a clearing house for dozens of furry fanzines, portfolios, books, calendars, and other items. Find out more at www.rabbitvalley.com, or send $5.00 for a print catalog (with a $2.50 discount) to Rabco Publishing Inc., P.O. Box 540568, Waltham, MA 02454-0568.

As of this writing, the Disney/Pixar film Monsters, Inc. has risen to become Pixar's highest grossing film, and Disney's second-highest grossing animated film. Their next collaboration is Finding Nemo, an undersea adventure starring a cast of fish. Meanwhile, the 11 hour Shrek DVD (from Dreamworks/PDI, of course) is positively burning up the sales charts. Now the big question is which of these two (considered to be the big contenders) will take the first Academy Award for Best Animated Feature.

Meanwhile, the other thing to look for this March is the premier of the new CGI film Ice Age by Fox. In this film, a set of prehistoric mammals (a wooly mammoth, a sabertooth cat, a giant sloth, etc.) must work together to return a human baby to his family before the onslaught of glaciers destroy the land. The film is directed by Chris Wedel of Blue Sky Studios, whose CGI short film Bunny got the Academy Award in 1998. Voice actors include Ray Romano, Dennis Leary, Jack Black, and John Leguizamo

In the from-out-of-nowhere department: Coming to theaters very soon is Disney's Snow Dogs, a live-action comedy starring Oscar winners Cuba Gooding Jr. and James Coburn. The former stars as a Florida man who, having inherited a dog-sled team (don't ask, again), decides he's going to enter in the Iditarod Race in Alaska. (The Iditarod was made famous also in the animated film Balto.) Of course, being a comedy film, the dogs on the sled team all talk to each other. A lot.

And hey, speaking of Balto, the original 1995 film will be released to DVD on February 19th. On that same day the brand-new sequel, Balto II: Wolf Quest, will be released on video and DVD. It follows the adventures of one of Balto and Jenna's pups, who looks even more like a wolf than her father does.

Disney's latest gig appears to be releasing classic animated features re-formatted for the giant IMAX screens. First out of the gate is the re-release of Beauty & The Beast, in IMAX theaters now. This new release features a new animated sequence: The song "Human Again", which was cut from the original feature (before it was ever animated) but was included in the Broadway play version. And, just announced: On January 1, 2003, Disney will re-release The Lion King in IMAX format. Go to <http://disney.go.com/disneypictures/lionking/> for more information.

According to reports, a teaser trailer for Disney's summer animated film Lilo and Stitch appears in front of the IMAX Beauty & the Beast. If you've not heard, the new film goes like this: In 1950's Hawaii, a young girl adopts a very strange looking dog... whom she does not realize is actually an escaped, super-powered rebel from outer space. She then teaches him her favorite hobby: Doing the hula to Elvis songs. Yes.

Of all things: The teaser trailer for Dreamworks' new animated film Spirit: Stallion of Cimarron has been released, officially, through a furry web site: See http://www.tigress.com/jicin/Spirit_01.mov.

The latest animated film by Hayao Miyazaki (burning up the box office in Japan) is called Spirited Away. When her parents are suddenly turned into farm animals, young Chihiro stumbles into a magical land of gods and monsters. Word is out that Disney and Dreamworks are currently in a bidding war to see who will get the North American distribution rights.

Word is out that not only Scoby Doo, but Garfield is also coming to a theater near you (sometime soon) as a CGI character in a live-action movie.

Coming to your television this fall is Greg the Bunny on the Fox Network. In this comedy series we discover that the puppet stars of a popular children's TV show called Sweetknuckle Junction are not put away in a box at night: They are, in fact, real live beings with hang-ups, legal problems, and all the other troubles of celebrity. Seth Green (Scott Evil from Austin Powers) stars as the roommate of the titular rabbit puppet.

New anime to look for in DVD: Pilot Candidate from Bandai Entertainment. In the future, young teens are sent to train as pilots for giant battle machines to help protect human space. Our hero's mechanic/partner shows some definite feline traits: Check out those ears!

Marvel Comics, under their new mature readers "Max" imprint, will be releasing a new Howard the Duck six-issue miniseries. Returning to the title is original Howard writer Steve Gerber. Meanwhile, many of Howard's original adventures have been released in a special black & white collected trade paperback. The Essential Howard the Duck is edited by Brian Bolland.

The latest collection of Usagi Yojimbo by Stan Sakai is the Grasscutter II – Journey to Atshuta Shrine trade paperback from Dark Horse Comics. It's also available in a special limited edition hardcover. The story follows Usagi as he attempts to protect a powerful, magical sword while returning it home.

Recently stumbled across: Tarot: Witch of the Black Rose by Jim Ballant (released by Broadword Comics) features an anthro black cat lady named Little Red Riding Boo Cat. And she's in full color, too.

On shelves now is Saurians: Unnatural Selection, a two-issue miniseries spun off from the series Sigil. Brought to you by Waid, Di Vito, Hunter, and Quintana, this new full-color series follows the adventures of a reptilian soldier in his fight against the Planetary Union. Guess what? We're the Planetary Union! From Crossgen Comics.

New on the shelves from Radio Comix is Bunny Town by Will Allison: A one-shot tale of cuteness and despair, to quote a press release. It's 32 pages of black & white neuroses and angst with ultra-cute funny animals. While we're at it, look for Bureau of Mana Investigation, a new bimonthly black & white miniseries by Christina Hanson and Ed Garcia. In a future world where magic has returned, a human teams up with an anthro unicorn and dragon to battle demons in an elite police force. Meanwhile, issue #107 of Furrough celebrates that famous anthology's 10th anniversary with works by Melton, Ruzicka, Calderon, Lage, and Moran – along with a photo-morph cover by Silverfish.

Starting with issue #34, Shanda the Panda has expanded to 48 pages in every issue. This time 'round the famous black & white comic features the work of Curtis, Palmer, Wheeler, and others. Also out now from Shanda Fantasy Arts is the Katmandu Annual #3 (celebrating Katmandu's 25th issue), and SFA Spotlight #13: Women in Fur 2001 (with stories and art by Carole Curtis, Mel. White, Roz Gibson, Carla Speed McNeil, Kris Udpke, Cindi Harrington, Smudge, and many others).

The latest Tom Strong collection from Wildstorm/America's Best Comics, Tom Strong's Terrific Tales, features a new back-up story by Steve Moore and Arthur Adams (of Monkeyman & O'Brien) called Jonni Future. A young woman is cast many millennia into the future, where she must work together with an anthro leopard to save the future. It's in full-color and bimonthly. Those characters, and several other furies from the Tom Strong books, are also featured in The ABC Sketchbook, a special one-shot.

If you've missed the issues, Barry Ween, Boy Genius and his adventures with various talking monkeys and apes have been gathered in a new trade paperback, The Adventures of Barry Ween, Volume 3 – Monkey Tales. This very satirical series was created by Judd Winick, and it's published by Olio Press.

Speaking of monkeys and apes (mostly apes), Sky Ape – Waiting for Crime is now available from AIT/Planet Lar and Amara, McCarney, Russo, and Jenkins. In this black & white trade paperback, Kirk Madge (also known as Sky Ape, the world's hairiest super-hero crime fighter) has grown tired of saving the world, and has taken up life as an accountant. That is, until the world is threatened by the sinister O'Donnelly's Roofing Company. You heard it here.

Slave Labor Graphics are getting furry, in their own, typical weird manner. From the pages of Stitch come the Skelebunnies, now given their own black & white series. ("They're happy! They're dead! They're Skelebunnies!"). Meanwhile, the original Skelebunnies shorts have also been collected in the Skelebunnies Spanktacular. All of this oddness is brought to you by Tommy Kovac. Also coming from SLG (in March) is My Monkey's Name is Jennifer (hey, more monkeys!) by Ken Knudtsen. In this bimonthly black & white series, we learn that young Kaitlin has driven her pet monkey (actually a male chimpanzee) murderously insane by having him de-clawed, fixed, and constantly dressing him in dresses. However, when Kaitlin is captured by the nefarious Dr. Tunick and his band of transvestite ninjas, Jennifer the chimp must join forces with the mysterious Boney Man to save her. Hey, we don't make this stuff up, folks!

When you visit your local comic book store, keep an eye out for the new Warhamster T-shirt, brought to you by those nuts (John Kovalic and Raven Mimura) at Dork Storm Press. And of course, at your local gaming store you'll want to look for Warhamster itself (from "Games Dorkshop"); Chez Dork, a card game from Steve Jackson Games, and Warhamster Rally from Jolly Roger Games. If you're in a mood for even more John Kovalic, Dork Storm has re-released Wild Life: The Cardinal Collection in a new trade paperback that features Kovalic's early comic strip adventures with Carson the Muskrat and his friends. Note – it's limited to only 1,500 copies.

Tall Tails: Thieves Quest by J.D. Calderon and Daphne Lage has been released in a new trade paperback collection from Dream Weaver Press. Volume 1 features the first four issues of this magical, furry, black & white adventure comic.

Silk Purrs Press is re-issuing the Sophistiks

Katch-Up Collection, a compilation originally put out by Antarctic Press. Following the adventures of an ordinary cat-guy who suddenly finds himself rich – and in a very different environment – this comedy black & white was created by Castiglia, Sleiertin, Morales, and Esposito.

If you've not come across it yet, check out Superman/Tarzan: Sons of the Jungle, a new full-color miniseries from Dark Horse Comics, of all places. This "Elseworlds" series by Chuck Dixon, Carlos Meglia, and Dave Stewart mashes together the histories of these two heroes, and comes up with the story of Kal-El, Lord of the Apes.

The most popular on-line role-playing game on Earth, Everquest, is now a full-color comic book one-shot from DC Comics' Wildstorm imprint. In Everquest: The Ruins of Kunark (created by Jim Lee, Brad Mquaid, and Dan Norton), elves battle against powerful reptilian sorcerers with dark intentions.

Astonish Comics, publishers of Mike Kunkel's Herobear and the Kid, now have a second comic book title: The Lab by Scott Christian Sava. Livingstone the mole and Esteban the weasel are two employees of a company that tests product safety – often with disastrous results, especially for the folks who work there! This full-color comic book series is rendered in 3D-animation style. Oh, speaking of Astonish Comics, also look for two new Herobear and the Kid posters: The Beginning and Best Friends.

Unearthed classics department: Denis Kitchen Publishing has reprinted the original Harvey Kurtzman (Mad magazine) version of The Grasshopper and the Ant in an 80 page hardcover book. This full-color comic, first published in Esquire magazine in 1960, re-imagines the famous Aesop's fable from a beatnik perspective.

New in mini-comics: Literary Graffiti from Kami Shibal Press. Issue #1 of this black & white series by Jeff Alexander and Ian Sattler, which combines American and Japanese styles, features two funny-animal stories: The Deadly Persimmon and Super Glamour Battle Kitty.

Furries from a musical perspective show up in Beat Peculiar by Joe Meyer. This large (104 page!) black & white collection features the story of the Slammin' Bunnies, a rabbit rock group trying out a new lead singer. The second story follows three roommates: A flake, a DJ, and a werewolf. Third up is a story of Joe's real-life meeting with singer Tori Amos. It's all from Landwaster Books.

Old friends return: Peter Laird, one-half of the creative team behind the original Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, and recent TMNT artist Jim Lawson now present a brand new black & white TMNT series. Volume 4 takes place 15 years after the events in the last series – and comes to us from our old friends at Mirage.

The current issue of the comic book how-to magazine Sketch (#12) features an interview with Liberty Meadows creator Frank Cho.

New from Patrick McDonnell is the Mutts: Sunday Mornings trade paperback, featuring Sunday full-color comic-strip adventures with Earl the dog and Mooch the Cat. From Andrews & McMeel.

ConFurence Seven Guest of Honor S. Andrew Swann returns to writing with the new novel The Dragons of Cuyahoga from DAW Books. This fantasy/mystery shows what happens when elves, unicorns, and dragons suddenly appear in Cleveland, USA, and technology just stops. Life gets interesting – even more so, when the first dragon through the portal is found murdered.

Already generating buzz is The Amazing Maurice and his Educated Rodents (from Harper Collins), Terry Pratchett's first honest-to-goodness furry novel. Set (of course) on Pratchett's Discworld, Terry himself described the story thusly: "It's the Pied Piper story, told from the point of view of the rats – if that story also included a talking cat with the morals of Sgt. Bilko". You heard it here folks.

New from author Robin Jarvis (and Seastar Books) is The Crystal Prison, the second book in the Deptford Mice trilogy and the sequel to last year's The Dark Portal. London's city mice continue to battle the mysterious, evil power of Jupiter and his legion of rats.

Mainframe – Beginnings is a new furry SF novel written by Simba Wiltz and published by Xlbris. It's available as a 320-page softcover book and as an e-book. Simba Wiltz has a web site for his works at <http://www.wiltzworks.com/mainframe/>. Veteran animator Richard Williams, who created the cartoon sequences for Who Framed Roger Rabbit, now gives us The Animator's Survival Kit trade paperback. Based on William's very popular series of lectures, the book provides basic principles of animation for the classic and the computer animator.

Rio Grande Games is a card and board-game publisher with several new furry-oriented games in their collection. The Yeti Cup and Yeti Slalom are both card games where players assemble funny animal teams of skiers – trying to make it downhill all the way without the yetis getting them! In the card game Gargon, players portray warlocks competing to capture magical amulets from the various flying creatures of legend: Fairies, dragons, pegasi, and so forth. And Tally Ho is a board game where players are both the human hunters and their animal prey – who're both out to get each other! Find out more at www.riograndegames.com.

Wicked Press is another company with several furry-oriented game titles under its belt. In Cat RPG: A Storytelling Game of Fancy, players are cats who secretly help to protect the world of humans from magical threats that only felines can see. And in Tooth & Claw, role-players can portray any number of species of dinosaurs and battle against one another for survival. They're on-line at <http://www.wickedpress.com/games/>.

On the heels of Werewolf, Ironclaw, and World Tree, it seems that numerous furry-oriented role-playing games have been quietly making their way onto the scene. Dawnfire from Dawnfire Games (www.dawnfiregames.com) features a race of foxes. Dinosaur Planet – Broncosaurus Rex from Goodman Games (www.broncosaurusrex.com) features a world where humans have raised dinosaurs like livestock – while battling more intelligent tribes of predatory dinosaurs. Vortex

(www.fantasyflightgames.com) is a collectible card game that allows players to portray a race of reptiles, the Draconis, as well as other species. In the board game A Dog's Life from Eurogames, players portray street pooches out to try and collect the most bones in order to survive. And of course there's War Gods of Aegyptus (www.crocodilegames.com), which features whole armies of creatures based on several anthropomorphic gods of ancient Egypt. This last game also features a huge series of collectible miniatures. Whew!

Speaking of miniatures, a whole new series of metal miniatures for the game Ironclaw is now available from Sanguine Productions Limited.

Game Publisher d20 Systems has created a new series of adventures for the Dungeons & Dragons universe called Diomin – State of the Nations. Several new player races are introduced in these modules. In Volume I we meet the Gadianti, a race of anthropomorphic predatory felines.

New video games to watch out for: Jax & Dexter by Naughty Dog, for the Sony Playstation 2. This platform game follows the adventures of two boyhood pals on a mysterious island – where one of them gets turned into a smart-mouthed weasel. Now the challenge is to change him back.

Obituaries

You never saw him, but you knew him when you heard him. Veteran voice actor Lorenzo Music left us this last fall. After years as a producer and writer, Music's voice first became known on Rhoda in the 1970's, where he was the never-seen Carlton (your doorman). Cartoon fans, however, will remember him best as the voice of Garfield in Garfield and Friends and Tubby Gummi in Gummi Bears. No one ever sounded like him, nor ever will.

Comic book great Dan DeCarlo passed away this last December, at the age of 82. Dan was best remembered as the creator of Sabrina the Teenage Witch, Josie and the Pussycats, and other titles for Archie Comics. Dan was recently a Guest of Honor at the 2001 Anthrocon. He was also the inspiration for more than one generation of comic book writers and artists.

A different sort of obit: On what turned out later to be a fateful weekend (September 9, 2001), Disney permanently closed down the original Country Bear Jamboree audio-animatronics show at Disneyland in California. Though the show is still running in Florida and Tokyo, the original is gone – to be replaced by a Winnie the Pooh ride. On the final night, a massive party of annual pass-holders and Disney fans was held in front of the attraction, followed by a tumultuous final showing. Why Disney decided to do this even as they're gearing up publicity for the Country Bears movie this summer is anyone's guess.
